

“Perspectives on Morphosyntactic and Pragmatic Variation in Francophone Minority Communities”

CALL FOR PAPERS

For a special issue of Linguistic Minorities and Society

This thematic issue will contribute to the advancement of knowledge in the field of linguistic variation in the Francophone space, particularly in morphosyntax and pragmatics. In other words, it will be devoted to the exploration of subjects in the discourse grammar of French in Canada and elsewhere. Many studies have been conducted on the pronunciation (accent) and lexicon (words) of French varieties around the world. In fact, the French-speaking world has countless dictionaries and glossaries in which the lexical heritage of French varieties is recorded (Comme on dit chez nous – Le grand livre du français de nos régions, by Mathieu Avanzi, Alain Rey and Aurore Vincenti; Usito; Dictionnaire des francophones; Dictionary of Louisiana French, to name a few). The pronunciation (accent) of several varieties of French is also well documented (see, for instance, the program Phonologie du français contemporain [PFC] : Usages, variétés et structure, which presents the results of numerous inquiries into the sounds of French varieties, or the Paradis and Dolbec site [<http://phono.uqac.ca/>] on the phonetic characteristics of Quebec French).

In comparison, studies on morphosyntax and pragmatics are much rarer. Aspects of grammar and discourse are less salient dimensions in languages, which partly explains the lack of research in this area. Through research in sociolinguistics (e.g., on interrogatives and discourse markers), which remains fragmentary (see Gadet, 1997; Vinet, 2001), we know that morphosyntactic and pragmatic forms can vary from one French variety to another. The proposed thematic issue aims, therefore, to give visibility to the description of morphosyntactic and pragmatic aspects to fill an obvious gap in the studies of variation in the Francophonie. The issue also focuses on computer-mediated communication (SMS, social network messages, shared videos, etc.), to provide a resolutely contemporary portrait of linguistic variation.

Here are the important dates regarding this special issue of Linguistic Minorities and Society:

Proposals for articles must be submitted before May 1, 2022, and include: the name(s) of the author(s) and home institution; the title of the manuscript; and a 500-word summary (maximum) with references (space unlimited).

The evaluation of the proposed articles and the invitation to submit an article to the journal will take place between March 1st and August 1, 2023.

The tentative deadline for the submission of manuscripts is October 1, 2023. For the protocol for the presentation of manuscripts, please consult the following site:
https://icrml.ca/images/Editorial\_policy\_and\_ethics\_janvier2022.pdf

Authors who wish to access the French version of the protocol can consult it by clicking on the following link:
https://icrml.ca/images/Politique\_e%CC%81ditoriale\_et\_e%CC%81thique\_janvier2022.pdf

The members of the editorial committee of the special issue of Linguistic Minorities and Society “Perspectives on Morphosyntactic and Pragmatic Variation in Francophone Minority Communities” are:

Anne-Sophie Bally, Professor, Université du Québec à Trois-Rivières, anne-sophie.bally@uqtr.ca

Catherine Léger, Professor, Département de français, University of Victoria, cleger@uvic.ca

